

The Beaufort-based nonprofit Pat Conroy Literary Center has now expanded its reach with a new monthly author interview radio show on the Authors on the Air Global Radio Network and available through all major podcast apps and websites, including blogtalkradio.com and soundcloud.com

“Live from the Pat Conroy Literary Center,” hosted by the Conroy Center’s executive director Jonathan Haupt, debuted on April 22 with an interview with Tim Conroy, retired educator, author of the poetry collection Theologies of Terrain, and a founding board member of the literary center established in his brother’s honor.

The interview aired live on the 50th anniversary of Earth Day and during National Library Week and National Poetry Month, each in turn becoming an avenue into the forty-five-minute conversation between Haupt and Conroy.

The overarching theme of this first episode of the Conroy Center’s new show was one of optimism, that a writing life can begin for someone at any time and that it is never too late to say the “great yes” to one’s artistic calling. Haupt’s interview with Conroy can be heard in full at <https://soundcloud.com/authorsontheair>

“Live from the Pat Conroy Literary Center” is a gift to the Conroy Center from Authors on the Air host and producer Pam Stack, who interviewed Haupt about the award-winning anthology Our Prince of Scribes: Writers Remember Pat Conroy on her show on February 26. Stack was so moved by their conversation she offered Haupt his own radio show during their on-air discussion.

Summer guest authors on the Conroy Center’s interview program will include a trio of novelists: Kathleen M. Rodgers, award-winning author of the newly published The Flying Cutterbucks (June 25, 7:00 p.m.), two-time Lillian Smith Book Award winner and finalist for the Townsend Prize for Fiction Anthony Grooms, author of The Vain Conversation (July 22, 7:00 p.m.), and Haupt’s high school classmate Laura Trentham, author of the military family-themed Heart of a Hero series and more than 20 historical and contemporary romance novels (August 19, 7:00 p.m.). The podcast interviews will also be shared through the Conroy Center’s social media and email newsletter.
