

By Margaret Evans, Editor

It's still springtime, and my Adventures in Nature continue apace. I've come to rely on them as an antidote to all the noise and chaos out there – maybe even a permanent vaccination, though I'm still experimenting with that theory. Much testing left to do.

To that end: There's this little brown rabbit that often appears before me on the Cypress Wetlands Trail in the mornings, always in the very same spot. If you're interested, it's that curvy place in the trail right past the YMCA, if you step out the back door and wal

www.memargaret.com Rants & Raves