Comedy lovers and dog owners take note: This winter Coastal Stage Productions (CSP) unleashes a howlingly funny and touching tale that turns romance, marriage and pet ownership on its' ear.

Forty-something Greg brings home a dog he found in the park, bearing only the name "Sylvia" on her tag. A street-smart mixture of Lab and Poodle, Sylvia (Rebecca Donaldson) becomes a major bone of contention between husband Greg (Mark Erickson) and his loving wife Kate (Christine Grefe) who soon desperately seek counsel from marriage therapist, Leslie (Daniel Bittick).

Sylvia offers Greg an escape from the frustrations of his job and the emotional turmoil of middle age, but ultimately becomes a rival for love and attention. When Greg begins to spend more time with Sylvia and less time at his job or with Kate, the real struggle begins. It's laugh-out-loud comedy as we witness the two females battle it out.

"I can only call it one of the most involving, beautiful, funny, touching plays I have ever seen..." says NY Daily News.

CSP's production of Sylvia is directed by Luke Cleveland who says, "This play offers audiences a clever paradox – a classic love triangle of two women and a man, coupled with the not so classic love triangle of a man, his wife and his dog. While delighting audiences with its double entendre, this hilarious comedy combines love and discovery with the ease of a good, brisk walk in the park."
